Municipal funding cuts on the way

CHAD INGRAM

Staff Reporter

The provincial government will proceed with municipal funding cuts in 2020, Premier Doug Ford confirmed during the annual Association of Municipalities conference in Ottawa last week.

Those cuts will come in areas of public health and childcare and will be effective Jan. 1 of next year. There also seems to be an understanding among municipal politicians that more cuts are likely on the way.

"I came away from the conference with mixed feelings," Haliburton County Warden Liz Danielsen told the Echo in an email. "There is little doubt that all of us are going to be hit with changes and, in all likelihood higher taxes. While the province is offering transitional funding in several areas to get us through next year without drastic changes, the unknowns still associated with health care, ambulance services, long-term care and housing are all cause for concern."

Earlier this year, the government

TTC streetcar abandoned in woods draws social media attention

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

A photo depicting the rusted out shell of a TTC streetcar located in the woods off Kennaway Road in Haliburton posted on Twitter by Josh Matlow, a Toronto city councillor, on Monday, Aug. 19 caused a minor online stir, garnering close to 1,500 likes within a day.

TTC media relations and issues management specialist, Stuart Green posted to Twitter:

"TTC streetcar 2500, a Peter Witt, built in 1921 and retired in 1954. Likely sold by the scrapper as a body only and then hauled up there for a cottage or cabin ... or as a spectacle."

However Ken Wrigglesworth, a former Haliburton Scout Reserve staff member, who was part of a research effort behind historical kiosks at the Scout Reserve property, had another answer.

Wrigglesworth said notes from 1966 say "the retired Toronto Street Rail Car arrived during the winter of 1955, along the Kennaway Road, a mile or so west of the Scout Reserve, and [was] used by lumber cutting contractors who were announced that municipalities would be getting one-time grants, with the County of Haliburton receiving $725,000, Dysart et al and Minden Hills each $542,255, Highlands East $534,469 and Algonquin Highlands $532,292. Danielsen said it was clear at the conference that money was to be used by municipalities for streamlining of their own operations.

'Very difficult decisions ahead'

"Once again it was very apparent that the government is directing all of us to look at our services and find ways to streamline and make cuts wherever possible," she wrote. "A difficult task when it is my belief that the County of Haliburton and all the member municipalities run pretty tight ships. It was also apparent that the province is not necessarily placing an emphasis on amalgamations in rural Ontario, but rather on all of us finding better ways of conducting our business."

On public health, the province's plan is to switch to a framework where the province will carry 70 per cent costs, municipalities 30 per cent, with the caveat that costs for any municipality not increase by more than 10 per cent. Currently, municipalities have individual cost-sharing agreements with the province when it comes to public health, the province paying as much as 100 per cent in some cases.

However, Dysart et al Mayor Andrea Roberts, who sits on the board of the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit, doesn't believe the financial impact for the county will be that severe.

"The previous split was supposed to be 25:75 but in truth we were nearer 29:71 so I don't think the impact will be that great," Roberts wrote in an email. "Municipalities will be paying 30 per cent as of January 2020, but we heard from Minister of Health, Christine Elliott, that they are also asking health units to look for efficiencies. There will also be financial support to municipalities who receive a 10 per cent or more increase, but I doubt this will be the case for Haliburton County. The government feel many things can be done at the provincial level and that there is a lot of duplication, many of these observations came from an auditor general report in 2017. Examples given were around alcohol use, e-cigarettes etc. These are provincial issues, not local ones, and therefore the province should be dealing with these."

The province is in the process of consolidating health units, and it was announced earlier this year the plan is to merge the HKPR District Health Unit with those in Peterborough, Hastings County, Prince Edward County and Durham Region, a plan that Roberts said at the time she found disconcerting.

Roberts told the Echo the province is now hiring a consultant to help steer that consolidation process, and that proposed boundaries are under review.

"The boundaries for the new health units are still being reviewed and the province is listening," she wrote. "One thing I was pleased to hear is that they are hiring an independent consultant to help guide this process, and that the person they are hiring will be announced very soon. Minister Elliot said 'the system is in need of change,' but at least the changes will be made with input from the current local health units, mayors, wardens and others."

Algonquin Highlands Mayor Carol Moffatt told the Echo there has been no larger, long-term plan from the province in terms of how cuts will roll out, making the process difficult for municipalities.

"We knew cuts and changes were coming but it might have been better if the government had taken the time from the start to produce a fulsome plan where they and us would have the big picture in order to plan for it," Moffatt wrote in an email. "It feels disorganized – a bit here, a percentage there; a big announcement and then a walk-back. On the one hand you get a reprieve on ambulance funding and an infrastructure announcement, and on the other you have to absorb part of public health and child care."

There has been repeated rhetoric from the premier about the province getting out of the way of municipalities, allowing them to do their jobs.

"It's terrific that the premier wants to get Queen's Park out of our way, and let us have flexibility with our budgets, but what does that actually mean?" Moffatt wrote. "If it means we're going to be on our own to determine and provide for what we deem to be in the best interest of our respective communities, it could be a dream or it could be a disaster. Free rein or free falling?"

"The continued reference for this need to find efficiencies is somewhat insulting for fiscally-responsible organizations like both the County and Algonquin Highlands," Moffatt continued. "It makes it sound as though we're irresponsible and thoughtless decision-makers who need reining in. We've always done our best to carve out respectful, sustainable priorities for taxpayers and will continue to do so but people need to anticipate some combination of tax increases and/or changes to service levels and programming. There are myriad complex, moving parts in municipal governance and there are some very difficult decisions ahead."

Danielsen, who sits on the Eastern Ontario Wardens' Caucus, said the EOWC will work to try to mitigate financial impacts at a regional level.

"The EOWC is prepared to roll up its sleeves to work with the province to ensure the least amount of impact on Eastern Ontario," she wrote. "I think we're in for a rocky road."

ATV accident on Highland Street leaves woman with serious injuries

A 31-year-old woman is in hospital in Toronto with serious injuries following an ATV crash on Highland Street in Haliburton Village on the evening of Thursday, Aug. 22.

According to the OPP, shortly after 6 p.m. police were called to the scene of the single-vehicle collision, where it appears the woman had lost control of the ATV, striking a tree. The site was cordoned off for several hours while police documented the scene and gathered evidence. The investigation into the cause of the crash is continuing.

Man dies in ATV collision

On Aug. 4 shortly before midnight, the Haliburton Highlands OPP responded to an all-terrain vehicle collision on Boice Bradley Drive in Dysart et al. Two males were riding the ATV when it entered a ditch and struck a tree. One male was treated and released from hospital. The second male, Michael Bowen, 27, of Mississauga, was pronounced deceased. No charges have been laid and police did not comment on who was driving the ATV at the time of the collision.

The investigation is ongoing and police are asking for anyone with information with regards to this investigation to contact the Haliburton Highlands OPP at 1-888-310-1122.

supplying the Curry Mill as a dining hall and summer tool shed."

The Curry Mill was owned by W.R. Curry, whose grandson, Peter confirmed the story about the streetcar being used as a dining car.

Wigglesworth said the notes came from J.C. Moore, the Scouts Canada field commissioner responsible for locating the property for purchase in 1946. Moore was the camp's ranger from 1947 until he died in 1973.

The W.R. Curry property was sold to the Oshawa District Scouts in 1955 and was purchased by Sam and Adelaide McLaughlin. They wanted to establish a second Scout camp next to the reserve where Sam used to camp, fish and hunt as the guest of E.D. Fee in the 1930s, the notes state.

Fee, who owned Fee Motors (a GM dealership) in Lindsay, "partially/purchased/partially donated the property for the Haliburton Scout Reserve in 1947." He initially planned to sell the Scout Reserve 3,500 acres, but then sold an extra 600 acres of "prime shoreline" bordering onto Kennabi Lake when he learned its intended use was to establish a camp for youth. He then donated this shoreline property for $3,000, which covered the cost of improvements he had done to an access road to that area.

Scam targets clubs in eastern Ontario

Sports associations and clubs in eastern Ontario have been reporting emails from fraudsters impersonating senior executives of organizations using imitation email addresses, the OPP says.

These realistic looking emails attempt to trick the recipient into wiring money through an e-transfer and are phrased to make the request seem urgent and confidential. Examples the police provided include an email for an overdue invoice or equipment rentals. These emails are often called the "CEO scam," as they impersonate CEOs or other top executives.

The OPP is reminding the public to verify the sender's email address, as scammers frequently use addresses that look very similar to the authentic ones. You should also encourage your association or club to create a process for money transfers that requires multiple levels of approvals. In addition, limit the amount of detail put online, as fraudsters use this information to find victims.

If you suspect you're a victim of the CEO scam, contact the OPP or the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre (<http://www.antifraudcentre-centreantifraude.ca>). You can also call Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS) or report the incident online at <https://www.tipsubmit.com/start.htm>.

Police seize drugs, weapons in Highlands East

A man and a woman were arrested by the OPP on Aug. 21 for possession of drugs for the purpose of trafficking following a call of suspicious persons.

According to police, fentanyl, crystal meth and cocaine were seized as well as a prohibited weapon and two other weapons. A 21-year-old woman from Bancroft was charged with possession for the purpose of trafficking and possession of proceeds of a crime. A 19-year-old man from Toronto was charged with possession for the purpose of trafficking, possession of a weapon for a dangerous purpose, carrying a concealed weapon, obstructing police and breach of recognizance.

Both accused were held in custody pending a bail hearing at the Ontario Court of Justice in Belleville.

Along with 150 acres from John Harris, the Scout Reserve property measured 4,250 in 1947 (it then grew to more than 5,000 acres with future land purchases). GM dealership Curry Motors was started by W.R. Curry, who "had social as well as business connections with Fee and McLaughlin."

The camp was called Camp Samac Adventure Base, or just Camp Samac to locals like Peter, which is derived from Sam's first name and part of the surname.

When Camp Samac ceased operation the property was sold to Camp Timberlane close to a dozen years ago. The two camps shared the same lake, Lake of Two Islands.

Sam would later retire as president of GM of Canada and then became chairman of the board of GM Canada.

His family started the McLaughlin Motor Car Company, which merged with Chevrolet Motor Car Company of Canada to create General Motors of Canada Ltd. in 1918. The McLaughlins were known for their philanthropic efforts, including toward the Haliburton Hospital built in the early 1970s and the McLaughlin Planetarium in Toronto. Camp Adelaide (Girl Guides) was also paid for by the McLaughlins.

These notes were part of the brief history of the Haliburton Scout Reserve, compiled in 1972 for the 25th anniversary of the camp's founding.

The land the streetcar sits on now belongs to Camp Timberlane.

An abandoned TTC streetcar has been sitting in the forest beside Kennaway Road since at least the 1950s. Documents show that it was at one time used as a dining car for workers at the lumber camps and for storage. /ANGELA LONG Special to the Echo

Police asking public to report suspicious activity in Haliburton

JENN WATT

Editor

Police are asking members of the public to lock their vehicles and report anything that seems amiss following several thefts in Haliburton village.

Provincial Constable Michael Melnychuk of the Haliburton Highlands OPP said in the last two weeks, police received reports of one vehicle stolen in Dysart et al, items taken from two motor vehicles in Dysart et al and items taken from one vehicle in Minden.

Owners of the car stolen from Cattail Road in Haliburton on Wednesday, Aug. 14 said the car had been left unlocked with the keys in it. On Thursday, Aug. 22, it was found in the hospital parking lot across town.

On Tuesday, Aug. 20, Dennis Casey caught a thief in the act just before 5 a.m., when he noticed the car light on as he was preparing his morning coffee at home in Haliburton.

"Dennis got up and he went to put the coffee on ... he said, 'the lights are on in the car,'" said Roxanne Casey, Dennis's wife. "Then he realized it was someone in my car. He just yelled out the window, 'can I help you?' and [the person] bee-lined it out of there."

Casey said the man had a slim build and was wearing a hoodie. He stole some stamps and a lottery ticket.

Another theft was reported to police on Wednesday, Aug. 21 after someone broke into the Thrift Warehouse on Mallard Road in Haliburton.

"We do have them on video. It was about 6 o'clock [Wednesday] morning," said Stacy McLean, who works for SIRCH Community Services, which runs the warehouse as a social enterprise. "It was one person ... They [jimmied] a side door."

McLean said the person stole antiques and the donation jar, taking only about eight minutes to gather up the items. Costume jewelry, an antique hair clipper, antique books, an antique amplifier and Bunnykins dishes were taken.

Melnichuk said anyone reporting suspicious activity can do so through the OPP communications centre at any time by calling 1-888-310-1122 or by going online to OPP.ca. On the website, you can also find information about the Safeguard program, offered free by the police, which includes a survey of your property with suggestions on improving security.

He said it was important to contact police about anything that seems suspicious happening in the neighbourhood.

"People may think it's not a big thing, but all they have to do is give us a call and we'll come talk to them or give them a phone call and at least we can create an occurrence [report] and see where these suspicious activities are taking place," he said.

Hydro One presents counter-proposal on seasonal rate elimination

CHAD INGRAM

Staff Reporter

Hydro One has presented a counter-proposal to the Ontario Energy Board, as it asks the province's energy regulator to reconsider a plan to scrap a special rate class for seasonal residences.

As previously reported, since 2015, the OEB has given direction that it intends to eliminate the rate class for cottage properties, the plan to re-categorize those properties as either medium-density (R1) or low-density (R2) classes, depending upon location. Bills in the R2 class are higher since they entail greater delivery fees, and Hydro One has said that plan would negatively impact some 54 per cent of its seasonal customers, with their bills increasing substantially.

"We submitted a proposal to the OEB about an alternate way to handle this," Imran Merali, vice president of customer service for Hydro One, told the Echo. According to Merali, while the OEB plan would see bills for its seasonal rate customers increase about $1,000 a year, the proposal Hydro One has submitted to the OEB would see that increase reduced to approximately $65 per annum.

"We really want to get the message out to our customers that we're advocating on their behalf," said Merali, adding Hydro One is also hoping customers will get involved.

An updated section on the utility's website allows customers to review Hydro One's report to the OEB and have frequently-asked questions answered. It can be found at <https://www.hydroone.com/about/regulatory/oeb-applications/seasonal-rates>.

The number for Hydro One's customer contact centre is 1-888-664-9376. The OEB will be conducting a formal review of the proposal. The OEB can be contacted by phone at 1-877-632-2727 or through its website at www.oeb.ca.

LCBO staff members Mitzi Chitty, left, and Barb Barker spray district manager Richard Watterson with water guns in the parking lot of the Haliburton location on Aug. 23. Watterson volunteered for the soaking as an incentive for the store that raised the most money for United Way. Over a two-week period, customer donations at the Haliburton LCBO totalled more than $9,200, making the store No. 1 in the district, which includes 31 locations from Cobourg to Whitney, Minden to Bancroft. It was in the top five stores in the province. Money raised will go to local initiatives providing food and clothing to children and seniors, after-school initiatives, Big Brothers Big Sisters, and Food for Kids. # Valuable lesson learned after The Shot

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Cassidy Taylor of Haliburton is focusing on the positive after her finals experience in The Shot, a music contest that concluded on Aug. 17 at the Living Arts Centre in Mississauga.

Taylor did not make the final four, but gained perspective and said she appreciated how she developed as a performer during The Shot.

"That definitely motivates me to do better. You know I always prepare myself for the worst and hope for the best," she said. "It wasn't really a surprise necessarily, but it was a good experience. It's always good to not win all the time. It's good to be put down sometimes because it draws you back to reality. It's important to feel yourself too and not let other people just tell you you're great all the time ... it's good to kind of motivate yourself in a way. When it comes down to it, it's all the energy inside, you know? It kind of drives it all."

With her parents in the audience in Mississauga and support from friends and supporters watching online through the show's Facebook live-feed back home, she said that though she felt comfortable on stage, she felt nervous performing

Cassidy Taylor, who grew up in Haliburton, spoke about her experience competing in finals of The Shot on Saturday, Aug. 17 at the Living Arts Centre in Mississauga. Although she didn't make it to the final four, she learned a lot from the experience. / DARREN LUM Staff for the opportunity to be part of the final four.

"I get really nervous with these types of things because it's not just performing to an audience and connecting with people, the judges. Though we made friends with them by the end of it, the judges are looking for things. ...They're trained to look for criticism, which is good, but I'm just not used to that most times. I was pretty nervous. More than I would be for a regular performance ... it was a good experience. It was good to put myself under that pressure," she said.

Jessie T, one of the judges, was her mentor for the show and helped Taylor with her stage presence.

Among the things Taylor said she will apply to her future performances is connecting with the audience.

"I tend to draw the energy inwards. It kind of gets rid of my nerves to do that, I think. To kind of close my eyes and direct all the energy towards me, but I'm working really hard to kind of push that energy outwards and draw people in like that," she said.

Unlike other singing contests she's been part of where there was a competitive atmosphere, this year's experience included a collaborative vibe, particularly when it came to the final eight performers. The judges told her the atmosphere was unique to this year's group.

"This season we were all playing music backstage, talking about our lives and connecting with one another. In the top eight more so than the other groups, I think for sure," Taylor said.

She adds a contributing factor was how the eight-person group was together for the whole day, bonding.

"It was really cool to kind of not see jealousy at all. No one was jealous of anyone. It was just kind of a big support group," she said.

Taylor said now that the show is over she'll be meeting with the judges about options for her music career. She hopes to collaborate with any of the top-eight finalists. While home the next few weeks, she plans to perform and collaborate with fellow Haliburton Highlands Secondary School alumnus Marques Bortolussi. She is working on the steps towards releasing an EP, or extended play record, she said.

See her live when she performs with bandmates Marques and his brother Lucas Bortolussi and Spencer Devolin at The Great Haliburton Summer Sendoff on Saturday, Aug. 31 held at Haliburton Highlands Brewing. Dark is Our Danger, Nick & Benton, Zachary Lucky and Richard Garvey will also be featured. There is limited seating, so bring your chair. Tickets are $35 at www.eventbrite.ca/e/the-great-haliburton-summer-sendoff-tickets-63883993745.

Taylor loves singing and felt the same sentiment exuded by the other competitors at The Shot.

Her advice for any other budding musical artists is to remember it all comes down to respect.

"Music is never a competition. If you want to make it ... just be supportive and be nice to everyone you talk to. Be respectful," she said.

Realtors tackling housing shortage

JENN WATT

Editor

A regional housing task force comprised of realtors from Parry Sound, Orillia, Muskoka and Haliburton County intends to lobby for changes to government legislation that hinders the creation of all types of housing.

Launched in the fall of 2018, the group includes local real estate agents Andrew Hodgson and Karen Nimigon, and is organized by The Lakelands Association of Realtors, a non-profit industry group made up of realtors from cottage country.

"Locally, we've just started this committee, but our hopes are to look at things such as zoning, how we can allow more secondary apartments .... We'd like to see more duplexes, triplexes allowed on properties," Hodgson said.

"If you start looking in Haliburton County, there's a lot of rules against extra accommodations, even apartments above garages."

He said he and Nimigon already have informal relationships with municipal councillors, who agree that more needs to be done. The province has indicated it's looking at loosening rules, which could allow for fewer restrictions on housing.

Another issue for cottage country is the impact of new buyers moving up from the city.

"Over the last number of years we have found more and more that finding suitable housing has become a greater challenge as our local centres grapple with housing shortages across the board. One factor that has had a particularly strong effect in recent years is homeowners cashing out of the city and moving north," said Chuck Murney, chair of the task force.

Murney said that realtors cannot change the rules themselves, but can bring people together to have discussions about improving regulations, sharing success stories from other regions.

"An example that is being explored in some communities is the adjustment of bylaws or zoning requirements that are restrictive when it comes to garden suites and secondary units," he said. "Adjusting these requirements can help with affordability and provide more rental units. Another that we are advocating for is the lessening of the length of time and the amount of 'red-tape' to cut through in order to get a new development project off the ground. Any major developer will tell you that the timeline is excessive, measuring in years rather than months. The lobbying of appropriate government bodies to reduce these time delays is in all of our communities' best interests."

Although there are no rental vacancy rates available for Haliburton County, the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation rental market survey shows vacancy rates below one per cent for the last two years in City of Kawartha Lakes.

The 2019 Housing and Homelessness Assessment Report issued by the City of Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton County states: "An aging population and smaller households, along with an overwhelming reliance on single detached homes for housing in our area is contributing to a very low vacancy rate for rental units. This is driving rental costs upward at a pace even greater than inflation and putting added financial pressures on renters especially."

Hodgson points out that the county needs all types of housing, which has a "trickle down" effect on other housing. When someone moves into the condos in Haliburton village, for example, that opens units at Parklane Apartments.

The waiting list for subsidized housing had 1,700 households listed as of December of 2018. The average wait time is between three to five years.

"In previous years, the only solution to housing, everyone [would say the] government building housing," Hodgson said. "The private sector will do it, but you've got to get the cost down. You've got to allow them to do it."

Haliburton pride

ORGANIZERS OF Minden Pride Week laid out an ambitious schedule last week offering something every day and something for nearly everyone starting with a flag raising ceremony at the municipal office accompanied by instrumental and vocal performances, and poignant speeches.

Each day following included something Pride-related, from a movie screening, meet and greet, trivia night, street fest, story hour, and burlesque dance party. People came out in droves, enjoying the opportunity to celebrate the diversity of the LGBTQ+ community and to support fellow community members.

Plus, it was all a lot of fun.

In Haliburton village, a few businesses joined in with Minden's week, flying the iconic rainbow flags from their shops, adding bright bursts of colour to our main street. It was heartening to see and made our village feel even more friendly and inclusive.

The success of Minden Pride and the obvious desire throughout the county to support the message behind the week could offer an opportunity in the future. Could Haliburton village, and other points around the Highlands, join in with the festivities?

Often in Haliburton County, the villages work hard not to step on each others' toes. Canada Day is left to West Guilford to host while Haliburton holds back. Minden, Haliburton and Wilberforce schedule their Christmas parades so that Santa has time to make it to all of them.

But Pride is something that could – and should – be widely embraced across the county. We all should be happy to stand up for people's right to love who they love and be who they were born to be. Could Minden Pride morph into County Pride?

Aside from the obvious benefit of having more events accessible to more people, hosting Pride events in other villages could offer a unified and amplified message across the county. How great would it be to have Pride flags at each of the municipal offices? How heart-warming would it be to have events – even smaller ones – in any hamlet that was interested?

I know just from walking down Highland Street in Haliburton that having those rainbow flags fluttering in the wind reminds me of the positive, supportive, forward-thinking people who took the time to put them up. When you see a rainbow, you know you're in an accepting place.

And we could all use a little more acceptance.

Maybe next year, Haliburton could join with Minden to bring even more energy and enthusiasm to what has become one of the county's most important events. There is certainly enough Pride to go around.

What a summer it was

IT IS STILL hard to believe that it is the end of August. Our last winter went on forever, and then it was the long weekend in May, and finally we had spring. Everything seemed slow to bloom but when it did we experienced a very hot July.

Now we have the cold mornings of autumn and beautiful humidity-free days. But before we look forward at what is coming up let's take a quick review of what has taken place.

Head Lake has been the site of many family fun-filled events over the past couple of months. Thousands of people have enjoyed the week-ends that hosted art in the park, the craft brewfest, the rib festival, and the boat races. Also enjoyed were the weekly farmer's market and Music in the Park held every Tuesday. And we can't forget the Rotary Carnival.

First, a huge thank you to everyone that organized all of these events for us to enjoy, and all of the volunteers that take time out of their busy schedules to run these events. We appreciate everything you have done to make our village such a fun place to be. Second, thank you to everyone that attended these events. You supported the vendors and service clubs involved in these festivals, and your support means that they can continue to give back to the community.

The downtown Haliburton member businesses are especially thankful for all of the visitors that these events draw to our area. These visitors eat and shop and stimulate our economy. Their visits mean that our businesses get a boost to our Shop Local Campaign. This means more jobs for our local residents and that means more prosperity in our community.

Fall means back to school and back to work for our visiting cottagers but it doesn't mean that we have to stop enjoying family fun-filled events. The Hike Haliburton festival is just around the corner. This is a great opportunity to see and experience the Highlands. The hikes vary in length and terrain so there is an opportunity for everyone to get out and enjoy a hike.

Mark your calendars for Colourfest on Saturday, Sept. 28 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. There is no charge for this great day of music, horse-drawn wagon rides, scarecrow making contests, a pumpkin roll, and the antique car show. There are always more events added so come on out and enjoy the fun.

The world-famous Studio Tour is also scheduled to take place the first weekend of October and Thanksgiving weekend. Our very talented local artisans open their studios to the public. If you've ever wondered why our village is so well known for our arts culture, just take a tour of some of these studios. You'll be impressed by the uniqueness of each and every artist.

So as we get ready to send the children back to school, it doesn't mean that the summer fun has to end, it just means that we are ready to enjoy and celebrate the fall colours!

Still the same old Steve

WHEN JENN asked me if I wanted to go grocery shopping with her, I said no – and this time it had nothing to do with whether or not I got to sit in the cart.

You see, Jenn wanted me to step out in public just one day after I had landed a four and a half pound smallmouth bass on a fly rod in the heavy current of my favourite river – and I knew that, unless I told, texted and emailed the wrong people, word was probably out.

I think she would not have asked me to go had she understood more about the downside of being a hero of the people.

“Let me get this straight,” she began. “You’re afraid that if you go grocery shopping with me, you will be mobbed by an adoring public?”

“It was a 20-inch smallmouth,” I replied. “They won’t be able to help themselves.”

Jenn, who was born long after The Beatles’ invasion of North America, had no idea of the kind of mayhem an event like this could inflict upon a grocery store.

“People will be asking me to autograph frozen fish and tuna cans,” I muttered.

“I think it will probably be OK,” she said.

“Jenn,” I explained, “it was a big smallmouth, caught in front of credible witnesses and photographed extensively, caught on a five-weight fly rod in fast water! For the love of all things holy, don’t make me cause a riot!”

“It was just a fish,” she said flatly.

And therein lies the trouble with living with heroes. You soon get immune to the heroics.

Yet, as someone who had just entered the pantheon of fishing legends, I felt I had a greater responsibility. After all, a grocery store parking lot can only hold so many adoring fans.

So, I disappeared in my office and then walked out to meet Jenn by the door.

“The sunglasses, hat and fake moustache I can take,” she said. “The trench coat is a little much.”

I hung it in the closet after deciding it was a risk I would have to take. You see, it occurred to me that people might clamor around Jenn and pester her to tell the tale of my great catch – and someone needed to be there to make sure she told it correctly.

Minutes later, we arrived at a very crowded grocery store.

“Oh God,” I said. “Someone leaked our arrival.”

There was nothing to do but brave public adulation and countless anglers who would, very likely, want photos with me and free advice on how to land giant bass.

“I guess I brought this on myself,” I thought. Then I took off my sunglasses, fake moustache and matador hat and walked bravely into the store, ready to face a hysterical, adoring public.

Before that happened, however, I made an announcement.

“Hello everyone,” I began. “Yes, it is true that I caught a 20-inch smallmouth on a fly in fast water, but the truth is, I am not a hero. I’m just an ordinary guy who did a great, incredible, heroic thing that will be talked about for generations – should I live that long. As hard as it might be, I ask you to respect the privacy of Jenn and myself as we go about our daily lives – just like mere mortals.”

Jenn, who was clearly afraid this direct approach would backfire, covered her face with a flyer and hid among the tomatoes.

Luckily, however, it worked. Not a single person in the grocery store approached to ask me to sign body parts or to pose with them for selfies. Nor has it occurred since.

It just goes to show what happens when you don’t make a big deal about these things.

pic of the past

This week’s pic of the past was submitted by Pat (Dart) Smyth and is labelled “boy scouts.” It appears they’ve prepared a parade float, but there is no date on the image. Staff at the Haliburton Highlands Museum say this could have been taken at the old Haliburton fairgrounds, around where the arena is today, likely in the 1920s. It appears that some in the photo are wearing Indigenous garments, which today is considered cultural appropriation, but at the time might not have been seen as inappropriate. The parade they were preparing for might have been the Callithumpian Parade, which curator Steve Hill says was “a noisy merry-making annual summer event in Haliburton which occurred around late July to early August. It was a break from the heat of summer, an excuse to dress up, cut loose and make merry.”

To the Editor,

Just a quick comment on the great article by Mr. Ed Burke, “Backyard antics back in the day,” Haliburton Echo Aug. 13, 2019. Mr. Burke makes reference to someone named Bill. I would bet dollars to doughnuts that Bill is everyone’s friend Bill Davis, a great guy loved by all who knows him. And all the adventures they enjoyed as young boys. I truly enjoyed reading about the experience with the skunk and how it changed his perception about guns, and oh yes, how we had such mixed emotions about girls!

Mr. Burke, I am 87 years young and girls are still a mystery to me (LOL).

A great, great story sir, thank you for sharing.

Explore Kits for Kids hold tools for discovery and adventure

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

The Dahl Forest in Minden Hills became the setting for learning when Minden resident Jaime Bilodeau, her partner and her two-year-old daughter, Holly, set out on a hike with the Explore Kits for Kids backpack.

The Explore Kits for Kids backpacks hold close to two-dozen citizen science tools and are an extension of the HHOA O4Y Mobile Classroom, which can be used in schools, libraries, trade shows, special events, on the bank of a river or at the edge of a wetland.

Bilodeau said she appreciated the pack for all the tools, but particularly how it encouraged her daughter to explore.

"This kit is designed for those unfamiliar with local flora and fauna. It's a perfect kit for those visiting the area. Both my partner and I know the area so well that we honestly didn't use any of the reference materials but the kit really got Holly interested in going for an adventure to find turtles and frogs and kitties," she wrote.

This was Bilodeau's first trip to the 500-acre Dahl Forest, located five kilometres from Gelert and managed by the Haliburton Highlands Land Trust.

The kit has now "sparked a desire for us to take more family adventures."

Among the items inside the backpack: a magnifying screen; strainer; bug net; dry erase board; compass/whistle; four double-sided information cards with names and drawings of leaves, various birds such as eagles and hawks, tracks of animals, insect larvae and nymphs; writing implements and a retractable measuring tape. Bilodeau said the tools most used during their hike were the magnifier and the net.

She plans on using the backpack again for another trip.

"We encountered a lot of wildlife – dead (snake) and alive and some cool fungus and so many kinds of moss (which I had to research when I got home to find out what it was). We will definitely use the pack again. We would like to take it with us camping to try and catch some water bugs with the net," she wrote.

The idea came from the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association and CARP Haliburton, which obtained funding in 2018 from the New Horizons for Seniors program to build a mobile classroom and launch the HHOA Outdoors 4 Youth Club. The backpack contents were also provided by The Land Between's Turtle Guardians program, Robinson's General Store in Dorset, Haliburton Foodland, the Friends of Algonquin Park, and the Glecoff's Family Store in Haliburton.

"The HHOA and CARP Haliburton hold a joint interest in seniors teaching youth and youth teaching seniors – the transfer of knowledge between all ages with the outdoors being the venue and with nature providing the teaching tools," a press release from the HHOA says.

Backpacks can be picked up from library branches in Dysart, Minden, Wilberforce, Dwight or Baysville. In total, there are 25 backpacks, 20 of them are available for loan from the libraries. The remaining five will be at the HHOA fish hatchery where three will be used for the O4Y mobile classroom and two at the Turtle Guardians office.

Bilodeau plans to return to the Dahl Forest, which offers interesting vegetation and history, including wild oregano and old stone chimneys "standing like hidden giants in the overgrowth."

The Outdoors 4 Youth committee welcomes anyone who would like to contribute, especially youth and seniors, though all ages are welcome. Contact the HHOA at 705-457-9664 and leave a message for Rebecca or email her at hhoaO4Y@gmail.com.

makes and models on Saturday, Aug. 24. The seventh annual Wilberforce ATV Run had roughly 130 participants, who were excited to hit the area trails.

The day started with a hearty breakfast served up by curling club volunteers and registration. Then it was all hands on the handlebars as riders prepared for the 90 kilometre ride ahead. There were four checkpoints along the route.

Riders started at the curling club and made their way to Tory Hill then on to Hadlington and around Pencil Lake to the Five Corners. From there they travelled up to Gooderham and past Greens Mountain and then rode the Rail Trail back to Tory Hill and then back to the curling club for a roast beef dinner. Altogether the trail ride took roughly six hours to complete.

The trail route was designed for beginner and intermediate riders. Much of the route like the Rail Trail was easy to ride on, but there were areas for drivers who liked to climb rocks and run through the mud to have some fun on the intermediate sections. The ATV Association also waives the trail permit fees for riders participating in the event.

Funds raised through this event go towards the curling club's youth programs and curling rink maintenance. The Wilberforce Curling Club teams up with the Wilberforce Elementary School every year to teach curling to students from Grades 4 to 8. They also create a junior mixed competitive team if students are interested in getting more involved with the sport and the ATV ride helps cover the cost of the program.

Riders came from all over Ontario to enjoy the area's trails, the amazing scenery and to support the club and local youth. For others it was a way to come back to the community, like a homecoming. Ron Haley and his family moved out of the area several years ago, but return every year for this ride and stay all weekend at a local camp.

"It's a great event, it helps the community, it helps the kids and it's fun. I bring the whole family and we just spend the day riding together."

The Wilberforce ATV Ride is growing in popularity. Last year the event brought together 109 ATV enthusiasts and this year they reached 130 riders. There are already plans in the works to help build the event and bring more people to the community to enjoy the trails and everything the area has to offer.

Riders get ready and make their plans as they prepare for the seventh annual Wilberforce ATV Run. / KRISTENA SCHUTT-MOORE Special to the Echo

As they come out of the gate this rider yells out in excitement and waves to the crowd.

Lovingly remembered by Diego Guerra Sr. (Marcia Vallejo), Diego Guerra Jr. (Lisbeth Gamboa,) Christopher and Nicole; Daniel Guerra, Gabriel Guerra (Alisa), Mia and Angelina; Sheila Dyie, Enid Awuku and Tanya Awuku, Pablo (Fabian Disla Garcia), Saied Moshtagh and Joseph Corsi Awuku.

Robert worked at Ontario Hydro rising to the position of Assistant Treasurer. But his most noble and inspiring work was the help he gave to others giving generously of his time, talent and resources to those in need wherever he met them.

His other passions were following all sports and playing golf, travelling, and his beloved cottage at Haliburton Lake which he and many others enjoyed for over 50 years. More recently he has taken a great interest in genealogy especially the Gray and Gibbs families.

Those wishing to honour his name may make a donation to the charity of their choice.

Family and friends are invited to a Celebration of Life at the Thornhill Golf and Country Club, 7994 Yonge Street, Thornhill on Sunday, September 29th, 2019 at 1:00 pm. Reception to follow. There will be a graveside service at St. Peter's Cemetery, Maple Lake on a subsequent date. At Robert's request cremation has already taken place.
